

KEYSTONE STATE CAMPAIGN UNIQUE

Pennsylvania Treated to a Series of Surprises in Gubernatorial Contest.

HARRISBURG, Pa., September 2.—Pennsylvania is being treated to a gubernatorial campaign so unlike anything taking place within a generation that adherents of the old organizations of the two parties are growing accustomed to surprises. Gifford Pinchot has been furnishing most of the shocks and the impetus, the veterans of a score of campaigns, some of whom have facetiously said they are now merely pupils in a school of politics instead of participants in canvasses along methods approved in the nineties.

Will Clean Up State Mess. After reiterating all of the pledges he made during his campaign, including intention to drive the saloons out of the state, to forbid absenteeism and to move to Harrisburg and clean up what he termed "the mess" in governmental affairs, Mr. Pinchot announced he would not stand for people connected with the state government using official position in his behalf; that men could not play politics on state time and that they had to give the state the worth of their pay. After forcing upon the republican state committee his policy of no political assessments, he has made the policy of the party in state campaigning as distinguished from the election of national officers such a contrast to what it was four years ago as to be almost unbelievable. The republican state organization has been built up upon most of the things he has cast aside.

Finds No Objections. Furthermore, Pinchot is "getting away with it." He has been going to the people in statements and open letters, in addition to his speeches, and no one is objecting a bit. The subcommittee made up in part of people suggested by him and State Chairman W. Harry Baker gave him the compliment of naming as chairman of the executive committee John S. Fisher, who withdrew from the race and threw his strength to Pinchot, and who has been active in his behalf. Pinchot has expressed conviction there is no need for the huge campaign funds of years gone by in state campaigns. His friends will work in harmony with the committees raising funds for senatorial or national purposes. While the voters have been digesting his Allentown speech and his statements since, he has been fishing for picketed on the ponds of Pike county and preparing for the speech-making tour he will start on September 10. This tour will eventually carry him into every county in Pennsylvania, but the candidate is running it himself. He jotted some of the old campaigners when he said he would hold a week or two open during the campaign season for rest or consultations or whatever might turn up. This was not at all in accord with accepted standards of Pennsylvania campaigning, which starts and continues to the finish. Just at present there is some activity on Capitol Hill in regard to gathering of data for making of a budget which is attracting attention. A budget has been the keynote of the Pinchot policy, and chances are the budget Pinchot makes will be the one to go before the legislature, as most people think he is going to be elected by a comfortable majority.

Pace Militant Bunch. But while Mr. Pinchot is inclined to be complacent about the result, there are people connected with the republican organization who declare he has a fight on his hands with a serious militant bunch of democrats who have been capitalizing the Pinchot issues themselves and making a haphazard method of handling things in the state treasury in a former term. The republican state committee is extremely energetic about the proponent of republican votes in the state, some of the old-timers are a bit apprehensive about the effect of the turnover at the capitol and of what the women may do, especially if the democrats carry out their threat to make cost of educational advancement an issue.

McSparan's Active Campaign. John A. McSparan, the Granger nominated by the democrats, is making an extremely energetic canvass, and the candidates on the democratic ticket have got together for what seems to have been a harmonious meeting at last. Meetings were held here this week at which all hands got down to serious business of making up an itinerary on which all will travel. The democrats are planning a series of dates representing various factions, largely because some parts of the republican journey will be made alone. Senators George Wharton Pepper and David A. Reed being naturally prevented from campaigning much by their Washington duties. In addition, democratic congressional and legislative candidates are here for a conference and heard speeches by the candidates, an adroit means to overcome the effects of the meeting of the state committee for organization when McSparan trounced the Bonnell well people and the third party idea was revived.

Woman, Running for Governor, Would Abolish Many Offices

Radical Views on Public Issues Feature Race.

Speeches of Miss Daly Exalt Sex as Office Seekers.

Special Dispatch to The Star. SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Sept. 2.—One of the spicy and spectacular features of the present campaign in South Dakota is the radical stand taken by Miss Alice Lorraine Daly, Non-Partisan League candidate for the office of Governor of South Dakota, on important public questions. She is conducting a vigorous campaign and is daily making addresses before South Dakota voters, not even omitting Sundays from the schedule of her addresses.

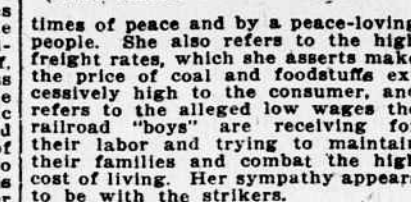

In her addresses Miss Daly states that while she is a strong advocate of prohibition, she favors the abolition of the office of state sheriff, which was created for the express purpose of enforcing prohibition. She charged that L. N. Crill, democratic candidate for governor, had quoted her as saying that the farmers of South Dakota should be permitted to manufacture liquor while corn is so cheap. Miss Daly denied ever having made such a statement in any of her addresses.

Other Offices Unnecessary. In addition to advocating the abolition of the office of state sheriff, Miss Daly also expresses herself in making an extremely energetic canvass, and the candidates on the democratic ticket have got together for what seems to have been a harmonious meeting at last. Meetings were held here this week at which all hands got down to serious business of making up an itinerary on which all will travel. The democrats are planning a series of dates representing various factions, largely because some parts of the republican journey will be made alone. Senators George Wharton Pepper and David A. Reed being naturally prevented from campaigning much by their Washington duties. In addition, democratic congressional and legislative candidates are here for a conference and heard speeches by the candidates, an adroit means to overcome the effects of the meeting of the state committee for organization when McSparan trounced the Bonnell well people and the third party idea was revived.

times of peace and by a peace-loving people. She also refers to the high freight rates, which she asserts make the price of coal and foodstuffs excessively high to the consumer, and refers to the alleged low wages the railroad "boys" are receiving for their labor and trying to maintain their families and combat the high cost of living. Her sympathy appears to be with the strikers.

Importance of Women. Miss Daly in her great speeches that probably the one great objection the men would have to voting for her for governor was the fact that she is just a woman. To combat this supposed objection she asks the men voters to remember the time when they were helpless, weak and exceedingly troublesome children that the most affectionate care they received was from a woman—their mothers; that after they had reached manhood they spent considerable time hunting for a woman who would assume the responsibility of caring for them for the rest of their lives.

L. N. Crill, democratic candidate for Governor of South Dakota, having returned from his tour of the state, leaves Miss Daly free to arrange her own speaking dates. These extend up to the eve of the election in November. Miss Daly appears tireless and is conducting a campaign which would take the strength of most male campaigners.

Many of her audiences are community gatherings at interior points where she has heart-to-heart talks with farmers and members of their families. She already has addressed scores of such gatherings in all parts of the state, and it is said no difficulty in getting out large crowds at all points where she makes addresses.

FUSION TO MARK COLORADO VOTING

Farmer-Labor and Non-Partisan League Parties to Join Forces.

MAY DRAW IN THIRD

Extraordinary Political Potpourri.

Special Dispatch to The Star. DENVER, Col., September 2.—Colorado's state-wide primaries will be held September 12, and there is presented a mix-up of the like of which the state has not seen in years. The hardest politician fails to hazard a guess on the outcome.

The congressional primaries have become involved by a fusion of the farmer-labor party, with 5,000 members, and the Non-Partisan League, with 20,000 members, with a very good prospect that the Farmers' Union, with 15,000 members, will come in on the ticket the farmer-labor party put up. The combination will endorse Benjamin C. Hilliard, one of three democratic candidates in the first (city and county of Denver) district, and a former representative, and Edward T. Taylor, democratic, present representative from the fourth district. Hilliard is endorsed because his views coincide with theirs, while Taylor's endorsement comes from the fact that he is voting for legislation favorable to labor and the farmer.

The combination will put up its own candidates in the second and third districts, now represented, respectively, by republicans, Guy U. Hardy and Charles F. Timbrell. Only the primaries will disclose whether this action by the farmer-labor and league parties will result on the returns. It means, however, that should Hilliard lose in Denver the combination will have its own candidates for Congress in two of the four districts. There is no question raised of Mr. Taylor's reelection.

Combination for Sweet. The same combination has endorsed William E. Sweet, one of three democratic candidates, for governor. Should Mr. Sweet be defeated the primaries there will be a third candidate in the field. The endorsements come pretty much as a surprise. It is stated that the farmer-labor party and the league party are not in the least friendly to each other. The farmer-labor party is a party of the people, and the league party is a party of the people. The farmer-labor party is a party of the people, and the league party is a party of the people.

Reverting to Governor. George B. Kindel, former congressman, who won his election some years ago on the freight-rate question, is again a candidate, emphasizing the "wets" as his program. As he has only the city and county of Denver to run in, and his backers are predicting his victory. However, indications are that the successful candidate will be James A. Marsh, present city attorney.

Fight to Shake Control. John F. Vivian, republican national committeeman for Colorado, has had to fight a combination that sought to prevent his election as committeeman in his own district. He was elected in Golden and his precinct is known as Golden No. 3, being the first ward in this town of 2,500 population.

He won this designation and then the fight turned to shake his control of the county. This latter fight was made on two candidates for county treasurer, and he won here also. There is a report that never before did a national committeeman have to fight for control of his home precinct. Mr. Vivian defeated Hubert Work, present Postmaster General, for republican national committeeman in a battle that was marked with considerable bitterness and lost Mr. Vivian by two votes the republican state chairmanship.

While other states are having or have had or will have their battles in the republican ranks between the progressives and the administration, Colorado is occupying. Both republican candidates for the nomination for governor were progressives.

In the republican state assembly one candidate was mentioned as a "republican in 1896, open and above board." This announcement recalled that in that campaign pictures of McKinley were torn down all over Colorado, McKinley buttons were trampled on, and if they appeared in scores of mining camps there were signs: "Republicans, keep out." Colorado was a Bryan state, and it took nerve for a man to be an open and avowed republican, hence the remark about the candidate in the assembly.

DEMOCRATS PLAN VIRGINIA CONTEST

State Committee Meeting Will Be Called for September 11, Says Report.

Special Dispatch to The Star. RICHMOND, Va., September 2.—State Chairman Harry Flood Byrd will call the state democratic committee to meet the night of September 11, according to reports here. That meeting will be interesting in many ways. The plans for the coming general election for members of Congress, and for a United States senator will receive attention, especially with reference to the seventh and ninth districts. Those are the only two in which there is or will be opposition to amount to anything. In the seventh, George C. Peery is making a hard campaign and the reports are that the democrats have better than an even chance to win.

On the other hand the republicans have begun their campaign with the nomination of Senator J. H. Harrison of Washington county, the singer of the campaign being at Harrison. Senator John C. Noel, now collector of internal revenue for Virginia, also spoke.

Representative C. Bascom Sloop was here this week. He said the warning given by Congress in the Paul-Harrison contest should serve as a lesson to the democrats that they could not return democrats to Congress when the sentiment was against such procedure, and intimated that Congress will make right the election of members to that body by unseating the democrats when they make such a move.
